KEYNOTE · THOMAS BJØRN · THE BEAR PILOT

ADVENTURE, AI AND TOMORROW'S ORGANISATIONS

From the cockpit over the North Atlantic to your organisation. What does it take in vision, courage and decisiveness to put Agentic AI to work?

ABOUT THE KEYNOTE

Starting from his latest adventure across the North Atlantic, Thomas Bjørn draws parallels between vision, courage and decisiveness in the cockpit and the changes Danish companies face as Agentic AI moves in.

From failure to success. And an honest look at how much courage it really takes to set the organisation free to experiment with a technology that may, in time, make people redundant.

- What should the technology be used for?
- How do we equip our people?
- How do we organise when people and AI agents work together?
- What does it mean for high-performance teams?
- What will tomorrow's skills profile look like?
- What falls to IT, and what knowledge is key in operations?

ABOUT THOMAS BJØRN

Thomas Bjørn is a pilot, an adventurer and a debut author: his philosophical fable "The Breakthrough", out in early 2027, takes us, among other places, into the future. When he is not in the cockpit of his 80-year-old Cessna 120 on his way across the North Atlantic, he works as a consultant on high-performance teams and Agentic AI. He has worked with change and IT in global organisations for more than 20 years.
